1.2 HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF MALTA

During British rule in Malta, the Royal Navy made extensive use of the dockyard. The British Building, originally designed by William Scamp R.E and built between 1841-1844, was built as one of a pair. The building was extensively damaged during World War II.

Through EM Architects' design interventions, the building was brought back to life with a renewed purpose to serve Bormla in a new way. As well as restoring the historic fabric in a meticulous fashion, the overall building was also rehabilitated in order to usher the building into the current age whilst at the same time managing to showcase its stunning historic elements. The guiding principle behind this project remained the act of showcasing this heritage building as a protagonist of design.

In 1689 the Knights Building was commissioned by GM Adrien Wignacourt. Later in 1776, GM Emanuel de Rohan constructs arcaded level above existing arsenal. During the British period, the upper level was used as a ropery and sail loft. Much of the building was left in ruins after severe damage during World War II.

1.6 QUALITY ASSURANCE AND STUDENT INVOLVEMENT:

At AUM, quality assurance encompasses all activities aimed at defining, assuring, and enhancing the university's standards—from strategic planning to curriculum development. This comprehensive approach involves every stakeholder, including students, who play a crucial role in fostering a quality culture within the institution.

As pivotal participants in the higher education ecosystem, students contribute valuable perspectives and innovative approaches to achieving excellence. A key aspect of quality assurance at AUM is ensuring active student involvement in governance, evaluation processes, internal reviews, and other critical decision-making events. This engagement not only supports students' personal growth but also significantly advances the university's development and commitment to high educational standards.

Through effective quality assurance processes, students at AUM have a direct impact on the quality of their own education. As integral members of the academic community, students are key partners in enhancing study programs, teaching methods, and assessment practices.

Their active participation helps shape academic discussions and drive improvements. Recognized as equal partners in higher education governance, students have both the right and responsibility to contribute to academic decision-making and quality enhancement efforts. Their involvement is crucial in creating a dynamic and responsive educational environment.

To ensure a structured approach to student involvement, AUM has established a comprehensive mechanism that enables students to consistently and systematically voice their opinions. The University's Student Representation System plays a pivotal role in fostering collaboration between staff and students to enhance the learner experience.

Student representatives are selected by the Student Union at the beginning of each academic year in September and assume their roles in October. These representatives participate in course-level program boards, faculty and university committees, as well as program validation and periodic review panels.

For information on becoming a student representative, visit the Student Union website and the QA webpage. Student members receive thorough induction covering their roles in university committees, quality monitoring, and periodic reviews to ensure effective participation and contribution.

At AUM, student feedback is integral to enhancing the university experience from application through to alumni status. First-year undergraduates complete an Experience Survey, third-year students evaluate their programs and courses, and second and third-year students provide feedback on placements via electronic surveys distributed mid-semester and at the end of each semester.

Graduate students and alumni also participate in tailored surveys to capture comprehensive feedback. These surveys, including the Student Experience Questionnaire, Student Programme/Course Questionnaire, Student Placement Questionnaire, and Graduate Evaluation Survey, are open for one to two weeks, with feedback provided within four weeks.

The Quality Assurance department oversees the design, administration, and evaluation of all student satisfaction surveys. For more information, visit Quality Assurance

1.7 YOUR LEARNING JOURNEY:

At AUM, each full-time faculty member is assigned a group of students as advisees, with assignments and changes managed by the Provost. Undergraduate students beyond their first year are typically advised by faculty members within their specific disciplines. Advisees may be reassigned upon declaring or changing their major.

All new students will meet with their academic advisor to discuss their program of study and create a tentative academic plan. Following this, students are encouraged to meet with their advisor before selecting courses for the upcoming semester to review their academic progress and make necessary adjustments.

In addition, AUM emphasizes academic integrity through its Student Code of Honor. Students are expected to uphold the highest standards by avoiding cheating, plagiarism, lying, and theft of academic materials. This Honor Code fosters a culture of mutual responsibility, respect, and fairness within the university community, and all members pledge to maintain these principles in their academic endeavors.

For more details, kindly contact the Office of the Provost: Provost Office

1.8 NON ACADEMIC MISCONDUCT:

At AUM, adherence to good behavior is essential for maintaining a safe, respectful, and productive university environment. All new students must attend mandatory orientation sessions, which begin a week before the semester starts, to familiarize themselves with the standards of conduct expected at AUM.

New and existing students should regularly review this Student Handbook and familiarize themselves with the student code of conduct policy available online here: Student Policies and Procedures

Non-academic misconduct at AUM includes behaviors that threaten or endanger the safety or well-being of others, such as physical assault, harassment, bullying and breaching Housing rules and regulations and or Maltese Residency Rules if relevant.

The university also addresses serious issues like sexual misconduct, drug and alcohol violations, smoking on campus, and damage to university property. Other misconduct includes unauthorized events, distribution of materials, disruptions in class, and tampering with university records.

The university is committed to addressing such behaviors with a focus on safety and education, and all cases are reported to Student Affairs. By adhering to these guidelines, students contribute to a positive and supportive academic community.

To report a suspected incident of behavioral misconduct at AUM, individuals (students, staff, or faculty) must submit a formal written report to Student Affairs, requesting action.

Student Affairs will review the report to determine if there are sufficient grounds to proceed. If warranted, the case will be forwarded to the student conduct committee composed of faculty, staff, and student peers.

The student under investigation will receive formal notification of the hearing's date and venue, and both the student and the accuser will have the opportunity to present their cases. Advisors from within the university community or the student's immediate family may be present to provide guidance, though they cannot speak on behalf of the student.

Following the hearing, the committee will make a judgment based on the preponderance of evidence and determine appropriate sanctions within two school days.

Sanctions are designed to be educational and restorative and may include written reprimands, work sanctions, restitution, referrals to community resources, housing probation, or other measures based on the case's severity.

The final decision and sanctions will be communicated in writing by the Student Conduct Committee. For more details on the process, kindly contact the Office of Student Affairs via email on: studentsaffairs@aum.edu.mt

1.9 STUDENT ACCOUNTABILITIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES:

At AUM, students are accountable for maintaining accurate contact information with the Office of the Registrar, including permanent and local address in Malta and wholly responsible for informing 'IDENTITA' if they change their address in Malta should they hold a Temporary Residence Permit (TRP) as underwritten by AUM.

Updates to addresses should be made via the MyAUM portal or by submitting the appropriate form to the Registrar's Office. Any changes to names or official identification must be accompanied by proper documentation and adhere to Maltese law.

It is also crucial for students to use their university-assigned email for all official communications. This email is the primary means for AUM to communicate with students, and students are responsible for checking and responding to messages sent to this account. Any forwarding of university emails to another account does not absolve students from responsibility for the content of those communications.

Each university course features a specific grading scale, prefix (or code), and number. The course prefix denotes the discipline or field of study, while the course number signifies the level of content.

For comprehensive details about mid-term and final exams, assignment reports, non-attendance warnings, class attendance policies, academic warnings, leave of absence, withdrawal procedures, grade reports, and appeal processes, repeating courses, resitting exams, add / drop and academic progress etc, consult the Academic Catalog.

This resource outlines your responsibilities and accountabilities as a student in good standing. Please ensure you refer to the Academic Catalog to maintain awareness of all academic requirements and policies.

In cases of bias or hate-motivated misconduct, where an incident is motivated by an individual's or group's identity such as race, ethnicity, gender, or sexual orientation the university may impose heightened sanctions.

For further information kindly see here: Student Policies and Procedures

By adhering to these responsibilities, students help ensure a smooth academic experience and maintain their standing within the AUM community.

For more information, contact the Office of the Provost via email on: provost@aum.edu.mt

Specific Safety Rules and Guidelines:

To ensure your safety and that of your peers, please observe the following rules and guidelines:

- Follow established safety procedures at the university.
- Report any sickness or injury, no matter how slight, to Facilities immediately. Do not treat your own or others' injuries, or attempt to remove foreign particles from the eye.

7.0 STUDY PLANNING - TIPS AND TRICKS:

Study Planning Tips & Tricks for University Students

Plan a Schedule of Balanced Activities

University life encompasses various activities, both fixed (eating, classes, clubs, part-time work) and flexible (sleeping, studying, recreation, personal errands). Balancing these activities is crucial for academic success and personal well-being. So, it goes without saying that attending your classes is crucial!

Allocate Sufficient Time for Studying Each Subject

Each university course typically requires about three hours of work per week per credit. Multiply your credit load by three to estimate the study time needed in addition to class hours.

Study at a Set Time and in a Comfortable Place

Developing consistent study habits is essential. Plan specific tasks, like “complete ten equations” or “read and take notes on chapter 6 for Chemistry,” rather than vague goals like “study chemistry.” Treat study time as you would a class—don’t miss it unless absolutely necessary.

Study Immediately After Class

Studying soon after class helps reinforce understanding and memory. Recopy or type notes while fresh in your mind and start assignments promptly to transfer information from short-term to long-term memory more effectively.

Utilize Odd Hours During the Day for Studying

Make use of short free periods between classes for studying. Research indicates that daytime studying is more efficient, requiring less time than nighttime studying. Utilize daylight hours for maximum productivity.

Limit Study Sessions to 2 Hours Per Subject

After 1 to 2 hours, concentration wanes. Taking breaks and switching subjects can help maintain efficiency. Schedule study sessions for when you’re most alert, whether that’s in the morning or late afternoon.

Trade Time, Don’t Steal It

If unexpected events disrupt your study schedule, immediately adjust and plan when to make up the time. Use weekend evenings effectively, committing one night to study but rotating it based on recreational opportunities.

Provide for Spaced Review

Dedicate one day per week to review work in each course, ensuring you stay up-to-date. Brief weekly reviews of all material can save significant time when preparing for tests and finals.

Review, Review, Recite, Recite

Organize notes into question and answer formats. Think in terms of questions and answers about the main ideas while reviewing weekly. Predict exam questions to enhance preparation. Regular review and recitation improve memory retention.

Keep Organized Notes on Lectures and Assignments

Good notes are vital for effective review. Capture key ideas in lectures and rephrase them in your own words. Track assignments and their due dates, dating and numbering pages for easy reference. Optimize your university experience with these study planning tips to achieve academic success and maintain a balanced lifestyle.

Leave Some Unscheduled Time for Flexibility

Flexibility is key to sticking with a schedule. Aim to establish consistent habits, which typically take about 30 days. For further study tips and tricks, contact the Office of Student Affairs and please make sure to take full advantage of your academic advisor who is there to provide academic assistance and guidance throughout your learning journey at AUM.

If you are feeling overwhelmed or stressed out don't forget to take advantage of the free student counseling service at AUM. The Student Counselor can be contacted for a one-to-one meeting via email on: counsellor@aum.edu.mt

8.0 MALTESE CULTURE FROM THE INSIDE OUT:

Studying in Malta offers a unique opportunity for students from both non-EU and EU countries to immerse themselves in a rich cultural tapestry and gain a global perspective. The importance of being culturally aware and respectful of the host culture cannot be overstated, as it fosters a positive and inclusive learning environment.

By embracing Malta's traditions, values, and social norms, international students can integrate more seamlessly into the local society, building meaningful relationships and enhancing their overall educational experience. Understanding and respecting the cultural nuances of Malta not only enriches the students' personal growth but also contributes to a more harmonious and collaborative community, benefiting both the students and their Maltese hosts.

Location and Geography:

The Maltese archipelago, nestled in the heart of the Mediterranean Sea, consists of Malta, Gozo, Comino, Cominotto, and Filfla. Over 93% of the population resides on Malta, the largest island, with the rest living on Gozo and Comino. While all residents proudly call themselves Maltese, those from Gozo often identify as Gozitans. Malta's earliest historical mention dates back to Saint Paul's shipwreck, as recorded in the Bible. Remarkably, the islands are home to 365 churches, with the annual 'Maltese Festa' being a cultural highlight for many locals.

Located just 58 miles south of Sicily and 194 miles east of Tunisia, Malta spans approximately 95 square miles. Gozo, known as Malta's green capital, is a popular retreat for those seeking tranquility away from the bustling main island. Efficient public buses and a regular ferry service ensure seamless connectivity between Malta and Gozo. The islands boast stunning beaches, coves, grottoes, and quaint fishing villages. In some areas, dramatic cliffs plunge into the sea, offering breathtaking views. Malta enjoys a mild climate year-round, with an average of over 300 sunny days annually.

Historic Valletta and Vibrant Victoria:

Valletta, Malta's capital, dominates the Grand Harbor. Constructed by the Knights of Saint John in 1566, Valletta has undergone significant renovations, particularly after being designated the European Capital of Culture in 2018. Gozo's capital, Victoria, is equally charming, offering a glimpse into the island's rich history and culture.

Demographics and National Symbols:

With a population of approximately 534,375, Malta is the most densely populated country in the EU. Saint Paul is a revered national symbol, credited with converting the Maltese to Christianity. The Maltese are proud of their Roman Catholic heritage, the iconic Maltese cross, and their resilience throughout history. Malta's bravery during World War II earned it the George Cross, proudly displayed on the national flag. Dolphins, often seen as brass door knockers, are also a beloved national symbol.

Language and Cultural Heritage:

Maltese, the only European language in the Afro-Asiatic family, shares similarities with Arabic, Hebrew, Berber, and Hausa. While influenced by Sicilian, Maltese is widely spoken and understood, with dialectal variations in Gozo. English is also commonly spoken, and many Maltese understand Italian.

Malta's rich history is reflected in its megalithic temples, Bronze Age sites, Phoenician inscriptions, and Roman catacombs. The Maltese cherish their Christian heritage, with the long-ruling Knights of Malta leaving a lasting impact on national identity and pride.

Maltese culture celebrates influences from Phoenicians, Romans, Greeks, Normans, Sicilians, Castilians, the Knights, and the British. The nation gained independence in 1964, joined the British Commonwealth in 1974, and the European Union in 2004. Malta's strategic location has historically made it a global trading hub, reflected in its multicultural population of over fifty thousand foreigners from various EU and non-EU countries.

National Identity and Ethnic Relations:

Maltese culture celebrates influences from Phoenicians, Romans, Greeks, Normans, Sicilians, Castilians, the Knights, and the British. The nation gained independence in 1964, joined the British Commonwealth in 1974, and the European Union in 2004. Malta's strategic location has historically made it a global trading hub, reflected in its multicultural population of well over fifty thousand people from various EU and non-EU countries.

Delicious Maltese Cuisine:

Maltese cuisine is a delightful blend of Mediterranean flavors. A typical meal includes pasta, bread, meat, vegetables, and dessert or fruit. Traditional dishes include minestra (a hearty soup), Lampuki pie (a seasonal fish casserole), stuffed octopus, squid, and cuttlefish in tomato fennel sauce, and bragoli (beef roulade). Don't miss out on Kinnie, Malta's national soft drink. Popular snacks include pastizzi, flaky pastries filled with ricotta, peas, chicken, or Nutella, while rabbit stew is considered the national dish.

Thriving Economy:

Malta's strategic location, pleasant climate, beaches, and ports contribute to its thriving economy. The country attracts tourists four times its population annually and excels in financial services, e-gaming, maritime, aviation, and construction industries. The public sector is a significant employer, maintaining control over strategically important industries.

Social Dynamics:

Maltese society is influenced by historical caste distinctions, with elite families often preferring private and church schools. Despite official claims of equality, social divisions based on family, heritage, political allegiance, and education persist. Malta boasts a high literacy rate, with equal opportunities for men and women in education and employment. Women frequently pursue careers as teachers, corporate service providers, and healthcare professionals.

Rich Social Fabric:

Family connections and social networks, known as 'Klikka,' play a crucial role in Maltese culture. Social behaviors vary based on status, familiarity, age, and connections, ranging from reserved to warm and expressive. Business relationships often develop within social contexts, and invitations to Maltese homes are highly respected. Maintaining 'face' is essential in Maltese society, ensuring respect for individuals and their families.

As the Director of Student Affairs and author of "Maltese Culture from the Inside Out," I cannot but emphasize the importance of understanding your own culture, as well as the culture of the country you are living in.

By appreciating Maltese values and being mindful of cultural sensitivities and trigger points, you can significantly enhance your study experience in Malta. Being culturally aware not only helps in building respectful and meaningful relationships with locals but also enriches your personal and academic growth.

Embracing and integrating into the host culture paves the way for a rewarding and unforgettable journey here in Malta. 'Merhba' as the Maltese would say, and may your time in Malta be filled with learning, growth, and wonderful memories.

10.0 PURPOSE AND INTENT OF THIS STUDENT HANDBOOK:

As the Director of Student Affairs, I cannot emphasise enough the importance and relevance of thoroughly reading, understanding, and being aware of the content of your student handbook. This essential resource provides comprehensive information on university policies, non-academic regulations, student conduct and campus services that are crucial for your success and well-being at AUM and while living in Malta.

Familiarizing yourself with the handbook ensures you are well informed about your rights and responsibilities, helping you navigate your academic journey with confidence and clarity. It serves as a guide to make the most of the opportunities available and to address any non-academic challenges you may encounter during your learning journey at AUM. I encourage all students to take the time to read and understand the handbook, as it is an invaluable tool in achieving a fulfilling and successful university experience.

And as a wise person once said: “Embrace every challenge as an opportunity to grow, for it is in the pursuit of knowledge that you will discover your true potential. Remember, the journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step take that step with courage, curiosity, and an unwavering belief in your ability to succeed.”

Warm Regards

Mr. David O’Shaughnessy EMBA (Henley)

Director of Student Affairs.
